Some of the Mexican rurales showed a clever piece of horsemanship as the parade moved off. One of the little ponies was badly frightened by the noise and crowds, and plunged and bucked until his rider was thrown. One foot caught in the surrup and the man was dragged. Two or three other ponies got excited and began to cut up. A couple of the rurales caught the free pony's bridle but could not hold him because their own acted so badly. Then a policeman got through and tried it without success. Finally the rurales formed a cordon about the struggling ponies and closed in until they were forced for lack of room to keep quiet. The man who had been thrown picked himself up and jumped back into his saddle, unburt. The column formed again and the episode was closed.

CAME TOO LATE TO STOP SUICIDE. Zimmermann Wrote Mrs. Blenbaum of His In-

Mis Bienosum and the memoers of the family had known Zimmermann for many years. He once made a fortune and lost it, it is said. In speculation, Zimmermann's wife died last January and after her death he often told friends that he had no desire to live. He refried the place in Frost street a week ago and began to fit it up for a candy and tobacco. Shop.

Mrs Blenbaum received the letter from Zimmermana at noon. He wrote that by the time she received it he would be in Heaven with his wife. Mrs Blenbaum hastened to the Frost street house and found the doors locked. Then she went to the Herbert street pelice station and a policeman went back with her and forced a door.

Why isn's my supper ready, Becky?" Montrof inquired.

"It is ready, Kessler," she answered.

"It is ready, Kessler," she answered.

"It suppose you've been letting it get cold all the afternoon?" he snarled.

Usually, when approached in this manner it had been Mrs. Montrof's habit to apologize and promise to try to be good if her husband would only forgive her. But this time she smiled and said that she had only just put the supper on the table.

It don't look good, commented Montrof.

To his surprise his wife only smiled at him. Usually she wept.

END OF STRIKE IN VIEW Machinists and Employers to Have a Conference Here To-night.

New York district of the National Metal Trades Association held a meeting at the Astor House yesterday to consider the strike of the machinists. About twenty firms were represented and a committee was appointed to confer with a like committee of the International Association of Machinists with a view to settling the trouble. Secretary Devens of the employers' organiza-tion was sent to the headquarters of the strike committee to lay the proposal for a conference before the strike leaders. The latter telegraphed to President O'Connell of they had been in position about three minutes. the International Association of Machinists in Washington and received his permission to meet the employers. The conference will take place at the Astor House to-night. Both sides seemed to think yesterday that the pros-pect was good for a satisfactory adjustment of the whole dispute.
